Not illustrated. 1894 Excerpt: . to the conclusion that the whole weight of girders and load must have been carried by the suspension cables. This portion of the work occupied about five weeks. The cables and supports mentioned were utilized to support the 150-foot span during erection, and although somewhat unsteady, especially during the high winds that are prevalent during summer, they answered their purpose sufficiently well. Portions of the lower chords of the old structure were left intact, and were brought directly under the line of the new lower chord; additional cross-bearers were placed in position, and the wrought-iron suspending-rods formerly in use were replaced by others in which were fitted union-screws. The level of the suspended platform was thus thoroughly under control. The 75-foot span was supported during erection by temporary wooden trestles. The whole of the work was completed on the 19th of June, 1891, having been four months in construction, including the time occupied in dismantling the old bridge. The total cost of the work amounted to 4,698 13-. 92., equal to 15 5s. per lineal foot. In addition to the bridge, provision was made for the carriage of passengers and mails across the river by means of a travelling cage; and the cost of this, together with the repair and maintenance of a road by means of which vehicles can reach the township of Cromwell by a detour, increased the total expenditure to 5,845 7s. Id. The Paper is accompanied by photographs of the old...
