Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .such an enormous number of human beings, can escape a certain nemesis. That nemesis no doubt will be felt by all the Powers who have possessions in Tropical Africa, and indirectly by the whole world, but especially by Belgium. If fate decrees that Belgium Inherits the evil crops which King Leopold has sown, then future generations of Belgians will have just cause to hold the memory of M. de Smet de Naeyer in bitter execration. That the sun will rise in the heavens to-morrow is not more certain than this. X This is, perhaps, the most notable utterance in the course of the whole debate; one which strikes at the very root of the Congo evil, and shows the extraordinary iniquity of the whole conception in the clearest manner. t This infamous article appears in the issue of the Brussels University Review for December iast. The name of the author is M. Rolin, the individual who was at the head of the Press Bureau! Christianise; men who, it is true, have not our culture, but who are, for all that, men like us--those elementary rights of humanity, which we must on the contrary claim for every human being. M. Beernaert: --It is abominable! M. Lorand: --And then, on the pretext that in certain Belgian provinces the corvee still exists (it exists in the provinces of Liege and Namur), involving two days work per annum, and those who own a horse, for instance, one day s work...
